Circle of Hope is Community Fairbanks Recovery Center's largest fundraiser of the year to support patient programs, helping more people who are uninsured or underinsured find a path to recovery. Featuring faces and voices of those in recovery, the event's goal is to raise funds to support an important cause as well as awareness of substance use disorder and ways to seek help.

Guests will hear from Chris Mullin, two-time Olympian, former professional basketball star, coach and executive. Chris, who played for the Indiana Pacers from 1997-2000, will serve as this year's Circle of Hope keynote speaker and will participate in an interactive conversation about his journey of recovery.

Individuals in attendance will also celebrate the 2024 recipient of the Richard M. Fairbanks Award, presented to Sam Quinones, a journalist, storyteller, former LA Times reporter, and author of four acclaimed books of narrative nonfiction, including "Dreamland: The True Tale of America's Opiate Epidemic." He will be recognized for his exceptional contributions to recovery efforts.
